

Critical Trauma Care

$250

Continuing education only – not for college credit

We train to be accurate and safe with our self-defense firearms, but how many people get the equipment and training to deal with the possible aftermath?

Learn what equipment you'll want in your blow-out kit and how to quickly and effectively employ it in the event of gun shots, stabbings, blast injuries, and auto accidents. These life-saving techniques will bridge the time gap between time of injury and surgery to best insure survival for the trauma victim.

Ken Kowalski recently completed 4 years of service in the US Army as a combat medic, having been posted to COP Jaghato in the Wardak Province of Afghanistan. His previous medical experience extends back to 1996, working in critical care and anesthesia. He is a Nationally Registered EMT.

In 2004 Ken began to collect firearms. Within a few years he became very interested in rifle marksmanship and became involved with the Applesed Project as both a participant and instructor in training. In addition, he helped to conduct classes with the United States Rifleman's Association in New Mexico.

Ken has shared his knowledge of rifles and firearms training with the public through the new media of podcasts. In July of 2011 he started the popular Rimfire Podcast, and then in August of 2013 added Modern Rifle Radio. Between the two, he has produced over 100 shows featuring such guests and co-hosts as popular photographer and RKBA activist Oleg Volk, Jim Fuller of Rifle Dynamics, Jack Spirko of the Survival Podcast, and Glen Tate – the author of 299 Days. In addition, Ken has appeared on Shooter Ready Radio in Colorado and was part of the big Memorial Day show on The Gun Nation with Doc Wesson.

After the US military, Ken began a career in custom Gunsmithing by attending and graduating from Trinidad State. In addition, he teaches firearms and trauma first aid classes.

Ken Kowalski

Supplies needed

Students should bring a Yoga mat or foam camping pad