ADMISSIONS

Admission to Trinidad State College is open to all high school graduates, non-graduates of high school who are 17 years of age or older and any other person who can benefit from the instruction. Admission to Trinidad State College does not ensure acceptance of an individual student in a particular course or program. If an applicant does not meet the requirements for a particular program, the student will be advised of courses or programs available to them. Admissions are subject to space availability and program requirements.

Non-high school graduates are strongly urged to take a high school equivalency test and earn a high school equivalency certificate. The General Educational Development (GED) test is administered on campus and is recognized by the State Department of Education, potential employers, and the United States Armed Forces.
